

Quality of Life Council Learns About 365 Things To Do In Houston

The Partnership welcomed Chip Rankin, President at Placemaker Media, Publisher at 365 Things to Do in Houston, as the speaker for the Quality of Life Council on July 19.

The 365 Things to Do in Houston website and social media channels are a vital resource to both Houstonians and visitors from around the world looking for ideas on how to spend their time in Houston. “By far our most popular posts are anything where people can gather together outside as well as any of the international festivals,” said Rankin. The original Greek Festival is still the most popular but other events including Palestinian and Japanese festivals are also of interest to readers.

One of their most popular features is “My Top Five Things to Do in Houston” which features notable local contributors and their favorite things to do in the area. The coverage of 365 Things to Do in Houston expands well beyond the innerloop including activities in Sugarland, The Woodlands, and Galveston.

The next Quality of Life Council is August 30.
