

The Partnership hosts annual Greater Houston Day reception in Austin

The Partnership hosted Greater Houston Day at the Bob Bullock Texas State History Museum in Austin on Wednesday, February 11. The event was an opportunity to convene our elected leaders and prepare for regional cooperation. Local officials including Harris County Judge Ed Emmett and Houston Mayor Annise Parker joined more than 40 members of the state legislature for this special event held just blocks away from the Texas State Capitol. The Houston delegation currently holds many important leadership positions, including committee chairmanships.

“I am optimistic about this session and the work we can accomplish as we work together to make Houston (and Texas) greater” said Bob Harvey, Partnership President and CEO. The Partnership’s top priorities include high-quality, full-day pre-K for qualified four year olds, increasing long-term transportation funding; and streamlined and transparent state and local incentives to support economic development.

Partnership President Bob Harvey and Houston Mayor Annise Parker attend Greater Houston Day in Austin.