Pascal Ochquee, Global Director International Logistics, Halliburton

Pascal Ochquee has 17 years of supply-chain experience, five of which have been within the oil and gas industry focused on Europe, the Middle East and Africa. Before joining Halliburton, Pascal worked in the supply chain within the aviation industry. At Halliburton, he has focused on logistics for moving high-value equipment between operations in Europe, Eurasia and Africa. In 2010 he moved to Dubai to set up the logistics structure for the MENA region and, more specifically, start-up operations in Iraq. After moving to the Europe and sub-Saharan region, Pascal developed a logistics strategy for the region that is focused on developing markets. In his current role as Director of International Logistics, based out of the Halliburton headquarters in Houston, he is responsible for the strategic development and direction of the international logistics organization for Halliburton.
