Go Beyond

Thomas Hundertmark, Senior Partner, McKinsey- Houston

Thomas is a Senior Partner in the McKinsey Houston office. He is a core leader in Global Chemicals & Agriculture, Oil & Gas, and Capital Productivity Practices. He counsels clients in the chemicals, agribusiness, (nuclear) power, and oil & gas sectors. His work anchors around strategy development, performance improvement programs, and large-capital project execution. He has been serving clients in North America, Europe, the Middle East, Africa, and Latin America.

Thomas has a background in chemistry. He received his doctorate from the University of Technology in Aachen. Before joining McKinsey, he worked as a research fellow at MIT and at Bayer AG. Thomas resides with his family in Houston, Texas.

Examples of his recent client work include the following:

- Strategy definition for one of the global leading petrochemical companies
- Comprehensive profit improvement program for a leading specialty and niche petrochemicals company targeting 25% cash and EBIDTA improvement
- Merger integration support for a leading pigments producer overachieving synergy targets, footprint consolidation and organization design goals
- Commercial excellence program at leading agricultural company targeting $>1 bn bottom line impact global initiatives
- Pre-and post-FID support for a >$1 bn petrochemical greenfield investment for an agrochemicals company in the U.S. GC (schedule and owner team review, contracting and project control tower support, cost benchmarking)
- Supply chain optimization for a leading global chemicals company
